Grand Jury recommends new welfare building

BY DENA BISNETTE

A Hancock County Grand Jury has again recommended that the Hancock County Welfare Department be provided with new facilities.

The welfare department is presently housed in a former creamery building on Necaise Avenue in Bay St. Louis.

The building's age and deteriorated state has led Hancock County Welfare Department Director Wallace Bradley to repeatedly seek help from the board of supervisors.

The interim report, signed by Grand Jury Foreman Alfred L. Arnold, requests that the existing building be generally maintained and that housekeeping services be provided.

In addition, the report asks that "a system be set up to insure communication between the welfare office and the board of supervisors."

The course of action advised in the report is sale of the now vacant Hancock General Hospital Building, which is county-owned, with the proceeds being used to construct a building housing new facilities for the welfare department and other county agencies.

"We appreciate the Grand Jury's interest and help in trying to get new facilities," Bradley said after the report was made public Thursday.

"Certainly anything helps. The more people who get concerned and interested, the more it will help us."

The welfare department employees were given some hope for a new building earlier this year when the supervisors agreed to seek a Community Development Block Grant for a new county office building.

In February, the board tentatively specified a site on part of the property purchased for Hancock Medical Center. In hopes of increasing the chance of obtaining grant funds.

However, the county can only apply for one Community Development Block Grant each year and must spend a specific percentage of any previously obtained grant funds before being eligible for the program.

For the past two years, the county has attempted to obtain a grant for a water system for the Catahoula and Steep Hollow communities in conjunction with Pearl River County.

The welfare department lost a round in its attempts to get a new building when the supervisors later decided that they should continue trying to obtain the water system grant rather than a grant for a new office building.

IN THE CIRCUIT COURT OF HANCOCK COUNTY
MISSISSIPPI

TO: THE HONORABLE CIRCUIT
COURT JUDGE KOSTA VLAHOS
INTERIM REPORT OF GRAND JURY
JULY, 1987 TERM

We, the Grand Jury for the July, 1987 term of Court, having been selected, sworn and charged, submit the following interim report:

We were empanelled July 7, 1987. We have considered a total of 81 cases of which we returned 64 true bills, 9 no true bills, 4 passed to the next Grand Jury, 2 cases were docketed in error, 2 cases referred to lower Court.

The Grand Jury recommends that the January, 1988 Grand Jury be furnished copies of this report as their first order of business and that the Grand Jury will make a diligent inquiry to see if the recommendations made in the previous Grand Jury Report have been followed.

We recommend that the January, 1988 Grand Jury be allowed to take the tour prior to the reports of the officials. All county supervisors and administrators of the cities of Bay St. Louis and Waveland are to be furnished copies of this report, as well as State Senators Martin Smith and Gene Taylor, State Representative Walter James Phillips, and the school boards of Bay St. Louis Separate Municipal School District and Hancock County, and the State Board of Education.

We recommend that the duly elected Supervisors of Hancock County read and study the findings and recommendations of this Grand Jury and make them a part of their minutes.

The Grand Jury heard reports from the following officials: Eddie Murtagh, Hancock County Tax Assessor and Collector; Terrell Randolph, Superintendent of Hancock County Schools; Mike Necaise, Hancock County Chancery Clerk; Mark Jamieson, Mississippi Forestry Commission; Bill Johnson, Maintenance Supervisor; Ronnie Peterson, Sheriff of Hancock County; and Dolph Kellar, President of the Board of Supervisors.

We are satisfied that the offices are operating within the scope of their duties.

In addition, the Grand Jury toured the new jail, the new medical center,

Standard man arrested, marijuana confiscated

BY DENA BISNETTE

The Hancock County Sheriff's Department has arrested a Standard man on drug charges and has confiscated 106 marijuana plants worth about $40,000.

According to Investigator Glen Strong, Wallace Clayton Russell, 30, of Rt. 1, Box 870-R, Pass Christian, was arrested at about 1 p.m.

Wednesday at his residence.

Russell was charged with growing and cultivating marijuana and with possession with intent to distribute the drug and jailed on $5,000 bond, Strong said.

In addition to the plants, which ranged from five feet tall to 13 feet tall, 19 pounds of processed marijua was seized during a search of Russell's residence, the investigator added.

The investigation resulted from a tip received by Deputy Nathan Hoda Sr., which indicated that marijuana might be found at the house.

Hoda observed marijuana growing over the top of bushes and searched the premises.

Cities, county request Chamber survey on Greyhound commuter bus ridership

BY DENA BISNETTE

The Hancock County Chamber of Commerce and public officials of Waveland, Bay St. Louis and Hancock County are working with Greyhound Bus Lines officials to establish a commuter service from Waveland to New Orleans, La.

Greyhound officials were already looking into the possibility of starting a daily commuter service when they were contacted by Father John Vaughn, a Waveland resident who serves as pastor of a New Orleans church, according to Dennis C. Marshall, Greyhound district manager for the New Orleans area.

Vaughn, a daily commuter, met Friday with Marshall and Chamber of Commerce Executive Director Olivia Milner, Waveland Mayor John Longo Jr., Bay St. Louis Mayor Victor Frankiewicz Jr. and Hancock County Board of Supervisors President A.A. Kellar.

"It would be marvelous if we could connect the Gulf Coast with New Orleans," Vaughn said. "It would be a good, low-cost and efficient method of commuting."

"All they need is customers," Longo said the city had previously attempted to establish a commuter rail service, which had been discontinued after the 1984 New Orleans World's Fair.

He asked that the Chamber of Commerce help with a survey expected to find out how many people would use commuter buses and how often they would use them.

Longo explained that the problem Waveland had had in attempts to establish a rail commuter service, other than the special service during the World's Fair, had been that no specific price had been given.

He estimated the average daily cost of commuter for a person driving a personal vehicle other than an economy car, using a pick-up truck as an example, at $20 per day.

"Last time on the rail service, 100 people signed up, but after we quoted them a price, only one stayed," Longo explained.

Frankiewicz, who was employed in New Orleans prior to taking office as mayor, said he is a former commuter and believes such a bus service would be successful "if you could make it economical enough."

Marshall explained that the cost could probably be reduced to less than $10 for a round trip ticket, based on full buses.

Two kinds of buses are available, including a mini-bus that seats from 24 to 26 people and a regular-sized bus that seats from 43 to 47 people.

Marshall explained that Greyhound is looking at commuter services because the company's new owner is interested in re-establishing service in smaller cities and areas such as the Gulf Coast.

There is a possibility that such a service could later be expanded into the Biloxi-Gulfport area, although tickets would probably be slightly more expensive, Marshall added.

The trip would be about 55 miles if the buses started their routes in Waveland, but Bay St. Louis and possibly Pass Christian could be added through multiple pick-up points on the same routes.

If the buses originated in only the Bay-Waveland area, it is also possible that only one pick-up point would be used, he added. That point would have to be somewhere that provides parking facilities, such as a shopping center parking lot.

There would be several stops in New Orleans for dropping off passengers, mostly in or around the central downtown business district at major office buildings and businesses.

Milner said there is some competition from the fact that $10 will fill the gas tanks of most economy cars and because some industries, such as a Michoud, furnish their own commuter buses or vans.

The school board voted Wednesday to accept a $75,000 Job Training Partnership Act grant and to advertise for bids for the computers to be used in the program.

The grant funds will be used to purchase the computers, programs and employ a teacher for one year.

Alderman hospitalized after gun accident

BY DENA BISNETTE
Waveland Ward Four Alderman Herman Yarborough has been hospitalized in Gulfport following a Saturday morning gun accident.

According to a Gulf Coast Community Hospital spokesperson, Yarborough was in stable condition in the hospital's intensive care unit Saturday afternoon following surgery for facial injuries.

According to Waveland Police Investigator Robert Tartavouille, Yarborough was packing his automobile in preparation for a vacation trip to Tennessee when the accident occurred at about 4 a.m. Saturday.

Tartavouille said Yarborough apparently dropped the handgun and the weapon discharged, with the bullet striking him in the chin and exiting through the left cheek.

The alderman's wife was indoors when the incident occurred, Tartavouille added.

Yarborough was taken to Hancock Medical Center by Mobile Medic Ambulance Service and later transferred to Gulfport.

Tartavouille said the investigation into the accident is continuing because authorities have not yet been able to speak with Yarborough.

The alderman also serves as city superintendent. He has served as alderman for more than 15 years and was re-elected in 1986.

Electricity: The Healing Current

When turning on televisions, plugging in curlers or turning down air conditioners, it is easy to see electricity helps with everyday life. But the same current that runs through appliances is now being sent through physical therapy patients to treat muscle, nerve and other related problems.

Electrotherapy has become a common medical treatment to relieve pain, increase blood circulation and stimulate muscle and nerve tissue.

Applying direct or alternating electric current to a stiff or sore joint or muscle may not appeal to everyone, but, according to physical therapists, the treatment is used daily with excellent results.

"Electrotherapy is one of the most dramatic and effective methods for physical therapy," said Devon Brust, a physical therapist at Memorial Hospital at Gulfport. "Patients suffering from various physical problems can often get immediate relief as well as long term benefit from the application of electric current."

In electrotherapy, electrode pads or probes direct electrical current to a designated area of the body. The voltage or intensity of electricity varies with the treatment and comfort level of the patient.

Two of the most common methods of electrotherapy deal more with relieving pain and swelling and stimulating a muscle or nerve to help a patient remember how the muscle feels when used.

"When electrical stimulation is applied to a working muscle or nerve, an obvious reaction takes place. On the other hand, a muscle or nerve that doesn't react usually indicates significant damage."

Electrotherapy is frequently used in combination with other physical therapy treatments, such as heat and ice packs, whirlpool baths and ultrasonic heat.

"The notion of electrotherapy is not new in the medical field, but its application is growing as therapists discover its effectiveness and versatility," Brust said. "I have many satisfied patients who can attest that electrotherapy definitely works."

However useful, electrotherapy is only one way electricity serves the field of medicine. Aside from powering the familiar lifesaving tools such as the electrocardiogram to monitor heart beats and the electroencephalogram to monitor brain waves, physicians have begun using electrically heated scalpels to reduce surgical bleeding and applying electric current to severely broken bones to help them grow back together faster.

Whether powering appliances in the home or teaching an injured muscle to move again, electricity continues to improve lifestyles - in sickness and in health.

HEALING CURRENT—Electric current is applied to a patient's strained ankle at Memorial Hospital at Gulfport's physical therapy clinic. Electrotherapy is an effective method often used to relieve pain and swelling in many physical ailments.

Episcopal Schools name headmaster

The Board of Trustees of Coast Episcopal Schools has announced the selection of Dr. Thomas Eugene Bates as headmaster.

Dr. Bates will be the administrator of Coast Episcopal High School in Pass Christian, Coast Episcopal Elementary in Bay St. Louis, and the Coast Episcopal Pre-School in Biloxi.

Dr. Bates holds bachelor's and master's degrees in music and a doctor of education degree in administration and supervision.

DR. THOMAS E. BATES

He brings to his new position 18 years experience as a teacher, supervisor and school administrator in public and private education at elementary through college levels.

As the director of graduate studies for Shenandoah College and Conservatory of Music in Winchester, Va.,

Dr. Bates was responsible for curriculum development and administered degree programs in business administration and music education.

He was also director of student teaching involving programs in 12 school districts in three states.

Dr. Bates served in the U.S. Army Signal Corps and was honorably discharged with the rank of captain. He also has experience in business management in the retail marketing field.

Dr. Bates and his wife, the former Carol Williamson, reside in West Biloxi. They have one daughter.

"Coast Episcopal has an outstanding reputation for teaching the total child," says Dr. Bates, "and I plan to strengthen the existing programs that have consistently enabled Coast students to score extremely high on standardized tests such as the ACT and the SAT."

Dr. Bates plans to enlarge the computer program to make it available to all children and to broaden its use for all classroom areas.

For high school students, sports and social activities play a large and important part in their development into young adults says Dr. Bates.

Last year at Coast, the sports program was enlarged to include football, basketball, softball, track and tennis for both boys and girls. This year the school hopes to add volleyball to its sports program.

Parents and students already enrolled in Coast Episcopal are encouraged to come to the high school to meet Dr. Bates. For anyone interested in enrolling their child or desiring more information, Coast Episcopal High School is located on Esby Avenue, about two miles north of the beach.

Dr. Bates is available from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday. Call 452-9442 for an appointment.

Once crabs are gone, they may never return

Today there are probably more crabs being caught in the Mississippi Sound than ever before. Yet, the Mississippi Commission on Wildlife Conservation decided on Thursday to table a proposed ban on taking sponge crabs (female blue crabs with eggs showing).

There are many crabs in the waters of the Mississippi Sound, yet they are not as plentiful as they were when one could visit the old highway or railroad bridge with only a couple of nets and catch a hamper full within an hour or two.

It was a good move by Bay St. Louis' Attorney Joseph Gex, a Wildlife Commissioner, who had made the proposal to reinstate a ban on taking sponge crabs. Too bad, though, other commissioners did not see the side of reality.

A sponge crab reportedly has some 2 million eggs, so one must realize the mortality rate is very high.

Biologists may argue that the taking of sponge crabs doesn't hurt the population trends of the popular delicacy, but are they sure of their predictions?

Wildlife Conservation members may wake up one day and there will be no blue crabs left in the Mississippi Sound. It will be too late then to place a ban on the capture of sponge crabs.

It is hoped reconsideration will be given by Wildlife Conservation commissioners to put a ban on capture of sponge crabs.

Improvement needed in Catastrophic Health Care Bill

The catastrophic health care bill which the House of Representatives was scheduled to take up on July 22 is an example of how a good idea is distorted in the Congress.

In my June newsletter to Mississippians, I said that protection from catastrophic medical bills is an issue that must be acted on by the Congress this year.

The staggering cost of medical care has become a major fear of many elderly Americans who simply cannot afford to become seriously ill.

President Reagan has submitted a plan to the Congress which would limit out-of-pocket medical expenses for the elderly and assess a cost to each individual's Medicare insurance premium of approximately $4.90 a month to cover the new services.

From that simple, basic approach has evolved a House bill which will raise the taxes of the elderly and put most of them in a higher tax bracket, an which ultimately will bankrupt the Medicare system.

Finally, the bill does not cover the number one concern of the elderly: long-term health care.

The legislation is financed primarily by having all elderly pay a "surtax" of up to $500 per year. That figure will rise to at least $935 in 1992 and to about $4,000 by the year 2005.

Whether a senior citizen opts for part B under Medicare or not, he is still going to pay for it under the House bill. The bill exempts no one from the surtax if he is a legitimate taxpayer. In addition, this premium cannot count toward a medical expense deduction on an individual's income tax.

This will be a double blow to the elderly who have been deducting the cost of the "medigap" insurance but who will now be forced to switch to this new government insurance program with poorer coverage and no credit toward a deduction.

Health and Human Services Secretary Otis Bowen estimates that the add-ons and the other costs of the bill will result in program costs jeopardizing the stability of the Medicare program's design.

He estimates the bill will cause a revenue shortfall as high as $10 billion by the year 2000, and at least $27 billion by 2005.

I question the fundamental unfairness of asking senior citizens to absorb the overwhelming cost of this program, while at the same time denying them what they already have provided for themselves in a superior way through the private sector.

In effect, the vast majority of senior citizens now will be forced to pay the government to give them coverage they already now have through the private sector.

The elderly should not have to choose between bankruptcy and health in order to pay for catastrophic health care costs, but the House bill is not the vehicle to accomplish that task.

I will be joining a number of my colleagues in the Congress to develop an alternative to the cruel hoax which I fear the House bill will perpetrate on our elderly Americans who need help now.

Quotables by CUEVAS

In traveling about, it appears the residents of the Cedar Point area of Bay St. Louis have to be some of the most exercising people.

No matter what time of day you drive down Beach Boulevard in Cedar Point, one will see people walking, jogging, or bicycling.

More people today are aware of the importance of exercise, and many citizens all over the county are either walking, jogging or bicycling, which is good.

Many of us find exercise a way of relaxing from the fast pace many of us now live.

Medical people will tell you exercise is good just about for any person.

By the way, I myself enjoy walking in the evenings.

Don't forget the big baseball tournament at the Tiger baseball field which continues today through Tuesday.

The Bay St. Louis 16 to 18-year-old Babe Ruth team is sponsor of the state tournament.

The eight-team double elimination tourney brings together the best young baseball players of the state.

Our local team under Manager Ronnie Artigues and Coach Fred Weems has a very fine record this year. It is hoped there will be a large turnout of local fans supporting our young boys to victory.

Another Hancock County Grand Jury has recommended repairs be made to the Welfare Building.

This, of course, is followed by a recommendation of selling the old hospital building and then constructing of a new facility for the Welfare Department.

It is hoped that all efforts will go towards the construction of a new facility for the Welfare Department, as the building they are now utilizing has seen its day many years ago.

We know the many employees at the Welfare Department will be grateful and are looking forward to the day they will have a decent building to work in.

Some of us celebrate birthdays, while others hate to think another year has passed.

Anyway, I would like to wish a big happy birthday to my mother who will be 80 years old on Tuesday.

Happy Birthday, Mother.

Price hike reported for vehicle tag renewal decals

Confusion concerning the motor vehicle inspection laws, and there price of license plate and boat registration decals has surfaced recently, according to Lt. Thomas Macon, director of the Motor Vehicle Inspection Branch of the Mississippi Highway Safety Patrol.

Macon said his office is receiving telephone calls from people who think that motor vehicle inspections are no longer mandatory and if they are, the price has been increased. He said that annual motor vehicle inspections are mandatory and they are $5.

The last legislative change in the Motor Vehicle Inspection Law, which was effective July 1, 1986, increased the price of inspection stickers from $2.50 to $5. That law has been in effect for more than a

According to the State Tax Commission, effective July 1, 1987, renewal decals for a vehicle license plate increased from $3.75 to $3.75 for decals expiring on or after July 1, 1987. The $5 difference is earmarked for the highway construction fund.

Since June 30, 1987, motorists purchasing and registering a vehicle for the first time with the State Tax Commission pay $10 more for the metal license plate. Five dollars of the increase goes into the highway construction fund.

The Department of Wildlife Conservation stated that the price of boat registration decals remained in the $2.50 but a new boat numbering system went into effect July 1, 1987.

Boat owners registering boats for the first time or reregistering boats will be issued new numbers. Boat registration decals are valid for two years.

Mammography Update

Mammography, or the x-ray of breast tissue, allows physicians to diagnose breast cancer at an extremely early and highly curable state.

Evidence shows that mammography can detect very small, localized breast cancers, giving these women a better chance of long-term survival.

Mammography has made significant contributions to the diagnosis of breast disease in asymptomatic women and in detection of breast cancer in asymptomatic women age 50 and older.

However, in younger women, the role of mammography is less clearly established. Many have questioned its use and have been concerned about the hypothetical risk from exposure to radiation during mammography.

In 1983, the American Cancer Society provided new guidelines to physicians for younger asymptomatic women. These guidelines are based on improvements in the quality and diagnostic accuracy of the mammography in recent years, concomitant with a marked reduction in the radiation dose.

The risk of inducing breast cancer with modern equipment is determined to be negligible.

Because one-third of breast cancers occur in women between the ages of 35 and 49, and most cancers are detected by mammography, the American Cancer Society believes asymptomatic women 40 years and older benefit from the mammography.

Last year breast cancer dropped from the position of number one cancer killer among American women to number two being replaced by lung cancer, only more cases of lung cancer. Nearly 120,000 new cases of breast cancer will be diagnosed in 1988.

The American Cancer Society has established several recommendations for asymptomatic women. Women should be taught to perform monthly breast self examinations by age 20. A physical examination of the breast should be performed by a physician every three years between the ages of 20 and 35 and yearly thereafter.

A single baseline mammogram should be performed between the ages of 35 and 40. From the age of 40-49, mammography should be performed at one to two year intervals as determined by your physician.

Women who are 50 and older, should have a mammogram performed yearly. Those women with personal or family histories of breast cancer should consult their physicians about the need for earlier and more frequent examination.

No excuses for the beat system

While some counties have looked for excuses not to adopt the county unit system, one county in South Mississippi is moving around the requirements of a state law and ahead with implementation.

The state law requiring counties to adopt the unit system also allows county boards of supervisors to exempt themselves from the law. That same law says county unit counties shall have a county engineer to handle road operations.

Pike County supervisors believe they cannot afford a county engineer, but they also believe that they cannot afford to operate under the wasteful, inefficient beat system.

So the county supervisors voted to exempt themselves from the state mandate, then continued their work to fully implement the county unit system by Oct. 1.

Pike County supervisors adopted a modified form of the unit system in October 1986. Last month, the success of the modified form led them to move to a full unit system. They plan to have it fully implemented by October.

The supervisors say that they know they have saved money by centralizing budgets, purchases, and road crews, but they won't know exactly how much until later in the fiscal year.

Twenty-two counties in the state have adopted the unit system under the state mandate. In some counties it is fully implemented; others are working for implementation by Oct. 1.

Of the counties that have exempted themselves from the law, many use the same tired excuses for not adopting the unit system—the county's too big, the county's too small, the county's too rich, the county's too poor.

Those that have implemented the unit system know these excuses are invalid.

No county is better off with the beat system.

And in Pike County, supervisors did not let legal wording keep them from operating under the unit system.

There are no excuses for continuing to operate under the beat system.

What service does ambulance service membership provide?

Letter to the Editor
Sea Coast Echo

Dear Editor:

Several articles have appeared in the Echo lately about the expanded ambulance service provided by Mobile Medic at a membership fee of $39 a year.

I have not seen one of their contracts and am wondering what services the membership fee covers. Does this provide emergency service only? Or in the event a patient is moved from a hospital to a nursing facility, or to another hospital, does membership cover these costs?

I think it might save confusion if customers could be informed what their membership pays for.

Salmonella in poultry not a new food poisoning

By Karen L. Moore
Mississippi Cooperative
Extension Service

Although a hot topic in the news lately, salmonella—called the "superbug of the 1980s" by some—is not a new type of food poisoning.

Recent reports in the media highlighted the amount of salmonella bacteria found on poultry. Lack of sanitation, slaughtering, processing and inspection methods can cause salmonella before poultry reaches the consumer.

"Homemakers have been dealing with salmonella a long time," said Barbara P. McLaurin, a food and nutrition specialist with the Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service. "We most often see problems at holiday time when food is prepared in larger quantities and left out for long periods of time for buffets."

Symptoms of salmonella poisoning include diarrhea, fever and vomiting, which lasts from two to seven days. Patients must take care not to dehydrate. If the symptoms are severe, hospitalization may be necessary. McLaurin said many cases of food poisoning are often mistaken for flu or virus.

Government estimates say 36.9 percent of poultry is contaminated by salmonella when it leaves the slaughter house or processing plant. Other sources say the estimate is too low.

Although current media attention is focused on poultry, salmonella can also occur in meat, eggs and raw milk, McLaurin said.

Scientists and government officials are working to improve sanitation, slaughtering, processing and inspection methods to decrease the risk of salmonella before poultry reaches the consumer.

But the National Broiler Council said new techniques in processing methods and equipment and inspection techniques have not contributed to increased product contamination, according to an article appearing in the April 27 Poultry Times.

The Senate Agricultural Committee has scheduled hearings on the U.S. Department of Agriculture's inspection program.

In the meantime homemakers can do what they've always done to minimize the chances of salmonella poisoning at home. Salmonella is easily controlled by careful food handling, McLaurin said. This means cooking food thoroughly, leaving food out no longer than two hours and refrigerating promptly.

McLaurin provided other ideas on how to keep food safe from salmonella.

Always wash hands in hot, soapy water before preparing food. Emphasize this to children.

"Never, never use the same knife, cutting board, counter top or other utensils on other foods after using those utensils on meat without having washed them with hot, soapy water," she said.

Poultry should be cooked to 185 degrees Fahrenheit and red meat should be cooked to 160 to 170 F. This means red meat should be cooked until grey in the center and poultry should be cooked until there is no red in the joints.

Don't taste for seasoning while cooking before food is safely done.

Keep pets and household pets away from food areas. They carry salmonella and other bacteria.

Refrigerators should register 40 F or lower and freezers should register 0 F or lower to keep foods below temperatures at which salmonella may grow. Appliance thermometers are inexpensive and can be purchased where small kitchen equipment and utensils are sold, McLaurin said.

"But uncooked poultry and meat can not be left in the refrigerator indefinitely," she said. One to two days is the maximum time to keep raw poultry and meat in the refrigerator before cooking."

Don't use cracked or heavily soiled eggs unless the food they're going into will be fully cooked. Salmonella can be on the shells.

Always cook poultry and meat at one time. Never complete cooking later because this can encourage bacterial growth.

Thoroughly reheat leftovers and cover leftovers while reheating. This retains moisture and guarantees that food will heat all the way through. Bring gravies to a rolling boil before serving.

Never leave food out more than two hours.

Thaw poultry and meat in the refrigerator or microwave oven. Never thaw on the countertop.

"Also don't cool leftovers on the kitchen counter. Put them straight into the refrigerator," McLaurin said. "Bacteria multiply rapidly at room temperature."

Divide large leftover portions into smaller portions so they will cool quickly to temperatures where bacteria quit growing.

Friendship Oak talks back

EDITOR'S NOTE: When news of the Friendship Oak's 500th birthday anniversary was printed in The Sea Coast Echo Joe Pilet and her sister members of the Friendship Oak Chapter NS DAR asked why their group was not mentioned in the article. Joe traveled to Long Beach and talked to the tree about the big birthday and the following is a record of that interview.

Tree: "Hello, Joe, I was expecting you. We had a pretty good sized rain and I felt it in my bark that you'd come to see whether my branches kept the rain from those who might be standing beneath them. What happened to you?"

Joe: "The rain was coming down in torrents. I was absolutely blinded by the downpour and I missed my turn into Gulf Park. Sorry I am late. How did you fare?"

Tree: "Like always. Dry as a Baptist preacher."

Joe: "Did you have any witnesses?"

Tree: "A few. Tourists will do anything to get their names in the paper. They even climbed into the platform where Vachel Lindsay is said to have taught college students. Population in those days was around 1,346 for all of Long Beach and the all girls school had a reputation as an "outstanding finishing school." Lindsay, the poet, was a one time member of the "college faculty." By the way today's Long Beach population stands at 20,000!

Joe: "Did the students do well in music, painting, and other cultural fields?"

Tree: "How should I know?" Remember those were the days before Off or RAID. However, I can tell you that pests did not repel the young dandies who came courting. There were lots of engagements."

Joe: "What about your age? The educated guessers say you are 500 years old. Do you think that's accurate?"

Tree: "Well you already know I am a lady. I would not lie to you. Actually I don't know when I was born. Maybe if you could locate some Choctaw Indian ancestor you'd come close to the truth. Indians were camping here when I was just a twig of a sapling. I think it is a time-honored lady's privilege to keep age a secret. Some modern ladies gave up that license when Social Security set age rules for eligibility. People will do almost anything for a steady income."

Joe: "I don't want to needle you, but maybe you could recall some of your early memories."

Tree: "O, I remember Indians lolling around eating crabs and oysters. I remember hurricanes. I remember people on small farms bunching radishes - 12 to a bunch. Five cents a bunch. The place was called 'The Radish Capital of the World. Not much of a claim to fame if you ask me."

Joe: "Then give me a quick run down on things you think outstanding in your long life? And while you are about it, what have you done to keep yourself looking so hail and hearty?"

Tree: "Well, I don't drink alcoholic beverages for one thing, and I really hate tobacco smoke (or juice). Being in tune with nature is the real secret. Never a day without the sound of birds - the far-away lapping of the waves - the wheeling gulls - fragrant pines - magnolias, and visitors with happy talk."

Joe: "So you live in the right spot for the things you like best. That's contentment. What about your highs?"

Tree: "Please don't think I am bragging, but I was CENTER FOLD in a time honored magazine. I was featured on the cover of a South Central telephone directory. I had a plaque installed on campus with a quotation from me. And I am the only tree to have a chapter of the National Society Daughters of the American Revolution selected as a name sake. That gives me prestige - known throughout the United States and several foreign countries! I try to hide my pride. Probably Plutarch said it best: 'It is indeed a desirable thing to be well descended - but the glory belongs to our ancestors.'"

Joe: "You are so right for it is not fame or name or state but 'Gilt up and git' that makes folks great."

Tree: "Are you coming to my birthday party. I hope so."

Joe: "Counting on it. August 1 - that right? But if the heat gets through to me and I don't make it please save an acorn for me. I'll use its cup as a candle holder when I have a birthday. Meanwhile, 'Happy Birthday, Dear Friendship Oak and many happy returns of the day.'"

Catfish Institute releases 'Fishing for Compliments: Cooking with Catfish'

BELZONI-What is delicious, hot or cold; prepared with pasta, soup, or au naturel; grown in Mississippi; and prepared by famous chefs like Craig Claiborne and Wolfgang Puck? Mississippi Prime Farm-raised Catfish.

According to New York Times Food Editor Craig Claiborne and Wolfgang Puck - owner of Los Angeles' Spago and Chinois On Main - Mississippi prime farm-raised catfish is one of the most delicious, versatile and nutritious fish available on today's market.

And according to many trend-setting food connoisseurs, catfish is quickly becoming one of America's most popular dishes, whether eaten at home or in chic restaurants.

Recognizing the growing enthusiasm for Mississippi Prime farm-raised catfish and consumer interest in new ways to prepare it, The Catfish Institute (TCI) - an association of farm-raised catfish growers and processors in the Mississippi Delta - recently published a colorful 16-page cookbook, 'Fishing for Compliments: Cooking with Catfish.'

Available to consumers at a cost of $1.50, the book is the first cookbook of its kind to be produced on behalf of the Mississippi farm-raised catfish industry.

It features a variety of easy-to-prepare and delicious appetizers, soups/stews and entrees calling for Mississippi Prime farm-raised catfish.

Among the savory selections: Pasta with Catfish and Artichokes, Catfish and Shrimp Soup, Catfish en Papillote, Catfish with Mustard and Cream Sauce and the traditional Classic Fried Catfish with Hush Puppies.

It is alarming that fewer and fewer eligible voters get out and vote or pay close attention to the issues or to the candidates running for office. Many times you have heard someone say, "my one vote won't matter, so I just didn't bother." Consider the importance of one vote here:

In 1645, one vote gave Oliver Cromwell control of England.

In 1649, one vote caused Charles I of England to be executed.

In 1776, one vote gave America the English language instead of German.

In 1845, one vote brought Texas into the Union.

In 1868, one vote saved President Andrew Johnson from impeachment.

In 1875, one vote changed France from a monarchy to a republic.

In 1876, one vote gave Rutherford B. Hayes the Presidency of the U.S.

In 1923, one vote gave Adolf Hitler leadership of the Nazi Party.

In 1941, one vote saved Selective Service just weeks before Pearl Harbor was attacked.

Summer Is Time To Preserve Herbs

By Milo Burnham
Horticulture Specialist
Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service

Summer is the time for putting up vegetables from the garden. Across the state, pressure canners, canning kettles and blanchers are going full force as gardeners fill their jars and freezers with the harvest of peas, corn, tomatoes, okra and other garden favorites.

It's hard, hot work and the kitchen counters may be covered with ripening tomatoes and the cupboard doors spotted and sticky from cutting corn but it's all worth it. I know, I've done it.

In addition to vegetables, gardeners with herbs should be preserving their extra for later use. Since most culinary herbs are used in small amounts, just a few plants can result in a lot of extra that shouldn't be allowed to go to waste.

There are several different ways of preparing herbs for later use. Among them are drying, freezing and flavored vinegar and oil.

Drying is still the most popular and perhaps the easiest way of preserving herbs and works well for thyme, rosemary, winter savory, sage and bay. Some herbs like parsley, chives and basil can be dried but lose a lot of their flavor in the process.

Herbs for drying should be cut in the morning when their flavor is supposed to be at its peak. The plants also have a stronger flavor just before they bloom. Remove any dirt from the cut herbs by rinsing and pick off any insect-damaged, yellowed or diseased leaves.

Tie the herbs in small bunches and hang them upside down in a warm, dry, well-ventilated place away from direct sunlight. Fresh cut herbs or the leaves removed from the stems can be dried by spreading them in a single layer on screens.

Dill and other seed heads can be dried in a paper bag perforated with holes for air circulation. Seeds that fall will be caught in the bottom of the bag.

Bunches of dried herbs lend an Early American atmosphere to the kitchen, but it doesn't help the quality of the herbs if you plan to use them for cooking. Keep dried herbs in tightly closed plastic bags or jars to preserve their flavor.

Herbs like mint, chives and basil that may not dry well can be frozen. Frozen herbs are limp and may be dark when thawed which eliminates their use as a garnish, but the flavor is preserved and they are fine for cooking.

It is also possible to chop or puree herbs with a little water and freeze them in ice cube trays. This works fine for parsley, dill and cilantro. Each ice cube is equivalent to about one tablespoon of fresh herb and the cubes can be added directly to soups, stews or sauces.

Sweet basil, the basic ingredient in pesto, can be pureed in olive oil.

Flavored vinegars and oils are relatively easy to make and give a special tang to salads, sauces, stews, marinades and grilled meats. Some herb purists insist that only cider or wine vinegars should be used for the best results.

Add 4 ounces of fresh, bruised herbs to each quart of cold vinegar in a glass container with a lid. Set the mixture aside for a couple of weeks and then strain the vinegar to remove the herbs and bottle it. If time is short, the vinegar can be heated to almost boiling and poured over the herbs.

Tarragon-flavored vinegar is a favorite, but borage and burnet can be used to give a cucumber flavor to vinegar and the blue flowers from borage turn white vinegar a light blue color. Purple basil turns white vinegar to rose as well as adds a strong basil flavor.

Sage-flavored vinegar can be used in preparing barbeque sauce for chicken. Almost all herbs can be used this way and combinations of herbs can be tried for a mixture of flavors.

Flavored oils are made the same way using olive oil or a good vegetable oil. Allow the herbs to steep in the oil for several weeks before using it. Placing peeled cloves of garlic in olive oil and storing in the refrigerator is one way of keeping garlic and having flavored oil for salads and cooking.

Some tender herbs such as burnet, basil, dill and parsley can be salt cured by alternating layers of leaves with noniodized salt, beginning and ending with a layer of salt.

It is also possible to make herbed salts by spreading a thin layer of noniodized salt on a baking sheet and covering it with a layer of fresh chopped herbs and another layer of salt.

Place the baking sheet in a warm oven for 10 minutes, remove it and break up any lumps and bake it for 10 more minutes. The dried salt and herb mixture should then be blended in a mortar and pestle and stored in a sealed jar.

Six writers make six adventurous expeditions in a rebroadcast of "River Journeys" on Mississippi ETV. The six programs can be seen at 8 p.m., Mondays, beginning July 27.

Oil overcharge refunds okayed in court settlement

The way has been made clear for farmers to receive oil overcharge refunds for the past seven and a half years as a result of a court settlement between various petroleum companies and the US department of Energy.

Hugh M. Arant of Ruleville, president of the Mississippi Farm Bureau Federation, said about $45.5 million will be refunded to patrons of agricultural cooperatives, and individual farmers qualify as claimants for this fund.

The Farm Bureau head said that the American Farm Bureau Federation has received preliminary approval from the Department of Energy to develop a program to facilitate direct refunds to farmers.

This includes those who purchased gasoline, diesel fuel, heating oil, propane, motor oil, greases and lubricants.

The amount of the refund amounts to $80 to $150 per 100,000 gallons used during the 7½ year period. But the federal department will not write a check for less than $15 because of the costs of processing.

Farmers, who are ineligible for the refunds because they are members of certain agricultural cooperatives who receive refunds intended to benefit co-op members through the patronage system, include farmer patrons of MFC Services and Delta Purchasing Federation which sell the farm supplies to many Mississippi farmers.

Arant said that applications for refund forms will be placed in all county Farm Bureau offices in Mississippi when they become available, and eligible farmers are urged to send the completed forms to the Department of Energy for consideration of a refund at the appropriate time.

MAGICWORD

HOW TO PLAY: Read the list of words. Look at the puzzle. You'll find these words in all directions—horizontally, vertically, diagonally, backwards. Draw a circle around each letter of a word found in the puzzle, then strike it off the list. Circling it will show a letter has been used but will leave it visible should it also form part of another word. Find the big words first. When letters of all listed words are circled, you'll have the given number of letters left over. They'll spell out your MAGICWORD.

Summer Sight Savers

Summer will be here before you know it. But before you head for the beach or the baseball diamond, take a glance at these sight saving tips:

Red, dry irritated eyes? Eye drops may help.

Many summer activities bring you in contact with objects that can enter and damage your eyes. So it's a good idea to wear the special eye guards specifically designed for the hazards you're likely to encounter. Wearing medium gray or green tint sunglasses helps reduce sun glare and eye strain.

Outdoor elements like smoke and smog, dust and pollen, even the chlorine in swimming pools can make eyes dry, red and irritated. One of the fastest ways to relief is an eye drop that moisturizes dry, irritated eyes and removes redness. Clear Eyes® with glycerin to moisturize and naphazoline HCl to remove redness is the only leading eye drop that does both.

If you ever have eye pain or blurred vision, see a doctor right away. Persons suffering from glaucoma or other serious eye diseases should seek advice from a physician before using any type of eye drop. Keep products for the eyes, out of the reach of children.

Contact lenses should be removed before using eye drops.

TRACKING DRUGS

Lord Peter Wimsey scores and unexpected success in the advertising world in "Murder Must Advertise," the next serial in the "Murder Most English" series. The episodes can be seen at 7 p.m., Saturdays, beginning August 1, on Mississippi ETV.

Wimsey (Ian Carmichael) is given a position as an advertising copywriter by the president of Pym's Publicity Limited, who fears one of his agency's writers may have met with foul play.

Wimsey soon discovers, first, he has a flair for writing advertising copy and, second, the agency's late copywriter, Victor Dean, was indeed a likely candidate for murder.

Lord Peter infiltrates the advertising agency, is introduced into a crowd of "bright young things" and is soon on the track of a drug ring.

Making Family Life More Fun

"RV" Spells Vacation Fun

Getting off to an early start can give you more time to relax and enjoy rest stops on your RV vacation.

The next time it's two or more for the road, you can see America in a style that means you won't be leaving the comforts of home far behind you.

Recreational vehicle (RV) vacations can give your clan the chance to get away from the daily grind of school or office and see the sights of America in a uniquely relaxing way. You set your own pace, driving just as many hours a day as you wish. At day's end, you can enjoy an outdoor barbeque, or a real "home-cooked" meal in your very own RV kitchen and dining room. Instead of paying high prices at a roadside motel, you can enjoy a good night's sleep in your own RV bedroom.

Here are some RV vacation suggestions from the people at Shasta, a leading manufacturer of recreational vehicles:

- Decide how many miles you should travel each day, and how many stops should be made along the way to your vacation destination. It's been found traveling 250 to 300 miles a day allows for day-time sightseeing and early arrival at campgrounds.

- Another objective is to be off the road by 3 p.m., which means avoiding rush-hour traffic in metropolitan areas and allows a majority of the driving to be done in the coolest part of a summer day. An early start—6:30 a.m.—gives you a time cushion in case of mechanical breakdown and makes allowances for unexpected "discoveries" along the way.

- Have your vehicle inspected before hitting the road. Check out wheel bearings and tires. Be sure to flush and clean the fresh water tank. Check for leaks. Inspect air conditioner and all appliances.

- When packing, it's important to make sure one side of the RV isn't overloaded. Good weight distribution is the key. Many RVs have adjustable air bags that can be increased or decreased to improve stability.

- Call ahead to campgrounds where stops are planned—many parks are full during the vacation season. Many commercially available campground directories provide detailed information about campgrounds and parks, including rates and what's offered.

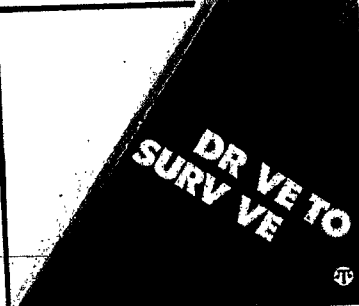

NEWS OF SAFETY

Drive To Survive

Fifty thousand people: That's how many die on the nation's highways annually. Each year, roadway accidents are the leading cause of occupational and non-occupational deaths and injuries. National Safety Week is a good time to find out what you can do to keep yourself and your family on the road to safety.

Wherever you may drive—around home, to work or even on the job—you can protect yourself and others by taking two simple steps, reports the Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA):

- Don't drive when you drink.

- When you drive, use your safety belt. More than 50 percent of highway deaths can be eliminated through the proper use of safety belts.

This year's theme for National Safety Week is "Drive To Survive." It's important, say safety experts, to drive defensively and courteously, obey traffic laws and to properly maintain your motor vehicles. Preventing motor vehicle accidents: It's the responsibility of every driver.

ETV Brief

FARM PONDS

Extension fisheries specialist Tom Willborn will offer tips on how landowners can manage their farm ponds for better fishing on "Farmweek" at 7:30 p.m., Monday, July 27, on Mississippi ETV.

"Farmweek" reporters also visit the 4-H meat "cookoff" held in Jackson recently. The students try their hand at cooking beef, chicken, lamb and pork in competition for statewide awards and prizes.

Also on this edition of "Farmweek" is a survey of this year's watermelon crop in the state.

FLEA MARKETS

"Mississippi Roads" goes to the flea market at 7:30 p.m., Tuesday, July 28, on Mississippi ETV in a rebroadcast from May. Ripley First Monday and the Canton Flea Market are on this week's itinerary.

"Roads" talks with Wayne Windham of Ripley, coordinator of Ripley First Monday, and traders Louise Carter and Flossie Duncan, both of Falkner, and with Velma Taylor, one of the originators of the Canton Flea Market, and Debbie Davidson, chairman of the 1987 Canton Flea Market, both of Canton.

Each time he fights, we win.

As a combat leader in Vietnam, he faced a new battle each day.

Now, Cono Caranna is fighting his battles in the courtroom, against a different kind of enemy. Drugs, rape, murder. All the felonies in our District. And he's winning.

Under Cono Caranna, our District Attorney's office is handling more court cases than ever before in its history. Over 2,000 last year alone. With more jury trials than ever before.

And he's filed for over one million dollars in confiscated cash and cars from drug pushers.

But Cono's commitment doesn't stop there. He's gone into the classrooms of our schools and established important programs to help keep our kids off the streets and out of trouble. Programs like Latchkey and Me-ology.

Cono Caranna has restored our faith in the D.A.'s office. He's reminded us what good public service is all about.

He's redefined the job of District Attorney. Made the D.A.'s office a strong partner in the fight against crime.

And in the process, he's given us hope for a brighter future.

It's not an easy job, but it's his job. That's why he keeps on fighting. And that's why he keeps on winning.

That's why, he's our D.A.

ROONEY APPOINTED— Jerry Rooney has been named office coordinator at Era-Bayshore Realty in Waveland. Rooney, a 1952 Stanislaus graduate, joined the firm in April.

Flavor like normal cheese

Low-fat cheddar cheese to have better flavor

One of the complaints about low-fat cheeses now being marketed is they just don't have the full cheese flavor. That's because a good part of that preferred flavor comes from the fat.

Now, food scientists in Mississippi State University's Dairy Science Department have developed techniques for making low-fat cheddar cheese with a full cheddar flavor.

John McGregor, a graduate assistant at MSU, described the new cheese during research sessions at the American Dairy Science Association annual meeting held recently at the University of Missouri—Columbia.

McGregor explained that normal cheddar cheese is considered to be about one-third fat, one-third protein, and one-third moisture (50 percent fat on a dry matter basis).

"One of the most significant innovations in the modern cheese industry is the manufacture of lower fat cheeses from milk that is concentrated by a technique called ultrafiltration," McGregor said. "This is filtering whole milk through a membrane that retains both protein and fat."

The Mississippi dairy food scientists and others believe nearly all cheeses will be made from UF concentrated milk in the not too distant future. But one of the concerns is that cheese-lovers don't find the low-fat products now being marketed as tasty as traditional cheese.

The Mississippi research team modified the ultrafiltration process to filter low-fat milk. McGregor manufactured cheddar cheese with conventional cheese making procedures.

The difference was he started out with low-fat (1.8 percent) milk, putting it through ultrafiltration several times, and ending up with milk concentrated to one-fifth its normal volume.

The resulting cheese had only 17 to 18 percent fat (or half that of normal cheddar).

To offset flavor loss resulting from fat removal, McGregor added a blend of enzymes during ripening. The cheese was evaluated by a three-member trained taste panel for flavor and texture before storage and after four, eight and 16 weeks of refrigerated storage.

The result was an aged low-fat cheddar cheese with a significantly better flavor and nutritionally equivalent to normal cheese. There is still work to be done to improve the body and texture of the product, but the Mississippi dairy scientists feel commercial products manufactured in this manner will be marketed within one or two years.

LONG ON LONGEVITY

When 102-year old Minnie Hendrix Randle of Holmes County looks back through the long years of her life to try to evaluate the reasons for her longevity she has to cover a lot of bases. Her life has been like that.

Today she still resides in the Mount Olive community where she was born the first child of Ed and Ellen Hendrix on March 27, 1885, while Mississippi was still licking its wounds from the Civil War.

There in the hill country that forms an eastern rim for the Mississippi delta, Minnie lives with a daughter, Applis Fluker, a retired educator, as she enjoys the presence of five succeeding generations around her.

As this writer sat down with the century-plus-year-old Mississippian recently, two great, great granddaughters came in from school to hug and kiss the matriarch of the family whose influence still helps shape family lifestyles today.

When people are able to do the unusual, others frequently are interested in how they did it. This writer wanted to know how this unique lady could gracefully move from one century of living into the next when it is such a rare feat in modern society.

Minnie's answers and those of her daughter began to fill in the picture. Early in life Minnie had known hard work as the firstborn in a farm family that grew just about everything they needed in the steep hill country about midway between Lexington in the hills and Cruger in the delta.

When young she soon became accustomed to helping her parents on the farm in almost the same role as a man. She plowed and harrowed and cultivated, for example, in the tracks of a mule for hours and days on end.

She went to church with regularity—a practice that did not end until she had reached her 100th birthday.

There at Mt. Olive Missionary Baptist Church, she learned a lot about the Holy Bible and sought to obey its admonition that if one obeys the Lord they will be long upon the earth.

She has lived out that reference to the satisfaction of her family, friends and pastors. Her religious convictions are strong. She sits in her chair today watching television programs and scolds aloud the skimpy attire of many female actresses.

Mrs. Randle remains in the attractive, comfortable home her late husband built for them on the farm she now owns debt-free. She shares the economic philosophy of her husband who had taught the children thrift to the point of saving at least one of every ten dollars they received in wages.

Mrs. Fluker acknowledged an even better lesson in economics from her parents than thrift. When she was a young lady interested in getting an education, her father took her to the bank in Lexington so she could borrow $100 to support herself in college.

Her dad had a good reputation, and all he had to do was escort her to the Holmes County Bank and vouch for her and the money was hers to attend Mississippi Valley College where she obtained a degree.

But her dad suggested further that she assure good credit of her own by paying off the loan before it was due. She did, and learned a lot about economics that served her and her pupils well during a 37 year career as a school teacher and principal.

Applis did so well at Mississippi Valley College that she continued her education at Tennessee State before returning to Mississippi to put her training to work in her home community.

As the interview continued Minnie sat observantly in her chair, responding in a soft voice to direct questions to her.

Outside the house on the farm premises was a tractor, a truck, a car. Each of them were insured. In the yard flowers were blooming and trees were budding.

All of it seemed to bear out the words of experience, wisdom, and faith that I had heard from the two ladies whose lives have been quietly, unobtrusively near the center stage of significant, often-overlooked, state history.

TIM'S AUTO TIPS

Other than the rear axle, the transmission wins the prize for being the most overlooked and yet dependable mechanism on a car. Fresh fluid at prescribed intervals and an occasional band adjustment are all an automatic transmission asks for. Average transmission life can be easily doubled by just following these simple rules. If the car is being used mostly under severe service conditions, the drain and change intervals should be shortened considerably, at least 25 or 30 percent. This is not asking much for years of trouble-free, dependable service.

Biloxi to become Gulf Coast rodeo capital for second year

Biloxi will become the pro rodeo capital of the South as hundreds of cowboys and cowgirls from all over the country and Canada compete for big money at the Second Annual Budweiser Super-Pro Rodeo July 30-Aug. 1 at the Coast Coliseum.

The rodeo will be the second indoor competition at the Mississippi Coast Coliseum in Biloxi with performances Thursday, Friday and Saturday, July 29, 8 p.m.; July 31, 8 p.m.; and August 1, 8 p.m.

Rodeo is not just something out of the Wild West, Rodeo's gone big time and it has become the biggest spectator sport in the country.

"Yes, bigger than pro football and pro baseball," said Matt Dryden, president of Circle D Pro Rodeo Co. Inc. of Marianna, Fla., producer of the three-day rodeo.

Today more individuals annually buy tickets to Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association (PRCA) rodeos than to regular season NFL football games.

Dryden also said that PRCA prize money last year was more than $16 million, almost as much as the PGA Golfer's Tour. In addition, an estimated 100 million households turned into televised PRCA rodeos. These rodeos are held in 41 states within the United States, and half the Canadian Provinces.

Not only is the Biloxi Rodeo sanctioned by PRCA but the Women's Professional Rodeo Association as well. That means, Dryden said, that spectators will see the very best cowboys and cowgirls as well as the top stock in the South. Several of Circle D's bucking broncs and bulls have worked the best competitors in the world at the PRCA National Finals Rodeo, the super bowl of rodeo competition.

Along with bull riding, other events include bareback riding, barrel racing, steer wrestling, saddle bronc riding, calf roping, and world famous bull fighter clowns.

Tickets for the rodeo are on sale now at the Coliseum Box Office and all TicketMaster locations throughout South Mississippi, South Louisiana and South Alabama for $9 and $7.50 plus computer charge. Tickets for children under 12 are $2 off for Friday and Saturday performances only. For more information call the Coliseum Box Office at (601) 388-6222.

VOTE TABULATOR DEMONSTRATION

Nova to air study of Borneo orangutans

WATERTOWN, MASS.—Tuesday, August 4, the PBS science series NOVA will rebroadcast nationally a one hour program at 8 p.m. featuring an Earthwatch-sponsored research expedition to the rain forests of Borneo to study orangutans in the wild. The program was filmed in 1985 by renowned nature cinematographer Wolfgang Bayer, and follows the scientist who lives with these human-like creatures.

For fourteen years, Earthwatch and National Geographic-sponsored researcher Dr. Birute Galdikas has lived with orangutans in the rain forest of the Tanjung Puting National Park. Her's is the first long-term study ever undertaken of the endangered orangutan in its natural habitat and centers on both a general study of orangutan biology and an attempt to rehabilitate captive animals to live in the wild.

Though the feature focuses on Dr. Galdikas and the orangutans, over 300 Earthwatch volunteers have worked closely with Galdikas and her predominantly Dayak staff for the past 3 years. The program promises to be informative and visually exciting as Wolfgang Bayer's camera brings an affectionate portrait of life in an extended family of humans and orangutans to living rooms across the country. Earthwatch is the Massachusetts-based nonprofit organization which recruits volunteers to share in the work and costs of field research worldwide. Since its founding in 1971, the organization has provided over 17,000 volunteers and $9.1 million to support over 900 expeditions worldwide.

Before marriage

Discussing money now avoids later conflict

Discussing money before marriage provides benefits comparable to what an X-ray tells about the body.

"Money management is accomplished with the least conflict when partners have an equal influence over the decision and these decisions are made before marriage," said Bouda S. Bridges, an area consumer management specialist with the Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service. "This important discussion should take place whether the marriage is the first or fourth."

Bridges provided the following suggestions on how to conduct this discussion:

Set aside time to talk about money. Each spouse should express his own feelings and try to understand the other spouse's feelings.

"Be open and honest about debt repayment," she said. "Decide if pooled resources will pay for student loans, for example, or if the person responsible for the loan will pay it."

Write short-term and long-term goals.

Decide on a realistic budget. Each spouse should list his or her needs and wants. Then, each spouse should list his or her assets and liabilities. This will help each spouse understand the other's financial situation and how each spouse will change when children are born.

Discussing differences in these areas and resolving them on the front end will prevent future shock," Bridges said.

Before making any major financial decision, each spouse should discuss it with the other. Women should use their names on all bank accounts and credit cards. Men should use their names on all bank accounts and credit cards.

Plan to build an emergency fund. Set aside two to three months' worth of living expenses.

Discuss how many credit cards each spouse will use and how they will be used.

Women should use their names on all bank accounts and credit cards. Men should use their names on all bank accounts and credit cards.

MY FELLOW MISSISSIPPIS:

Sweet potatoes are Mississippi's number one horticulture crop. The income from this crop contributes annually $80,000,000.00 to the economy of Mississippi. Sweet potatoes are regulated by the Mississippi Department of Agriculture and Commerce. As with any crop, we are confronted with problems from time to time. One such insect problem is the sweet potato weevil.

With a prompt response and common sense approach by Mr. Ross's office, this pest was eradicated on two different occasions.

Commissioner Ross has always answered our calls, and has promptly responded in person to our needs.

In appreciation for this the Mississippi Sweet Potato Council awarded Commissioner Ross the 1979 "Tater Boy" Award.

Nonchalance unacceptable

Treating storage bin pests requires responsible attitude

By Patti Drapala
Mississippi Cooperative
Extension Service

Mississippi farmers could once be nonchalant about handling chemicals used to control pests in stored grain.

No longer can they afford to discard safety procedures, according to guidelines issued by the environmental Protection Agency and Congress. Precaution is now the law.

To help farmers and applicators of these chemicals understand the safety mandate by the EPA, the Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service recently held stored grain pest control workshops in Cleveland and Jackson to reinforce the point that the guidelines must be followed. "Several factors generated the need for holding a workshop," said Dr. Jim Hamer, and Extension pest management specialist and workshop organizer. "These factors include changes in labeling, new products on the market, a change in emphasis of control and more storage of grain for longer periods of time."

Hamer invited representatives from commercial chemical companies, agricultural agencies, the

EPA and Extension to answer questions and address issues raised by workshop participants.

Misuse and abuse of grain protectants and fumigants, chemicals used to control grain pests, caused the EPA to investigate their use, said Carlton Lane, a consumer safety officer with the EPA. Before 1972, laws governing use of these chemicals had no provisions for handling.

"The older labels used to state the name of the product, what it was and the word 'Danger' and that was it," Lane said.

Because the labels skimped on information, applicators felt free to use chemicals indiscriminately in many cases, Lane said. Individuals and groups affected by the misuse complained to the EPA, and because a significant percentage of these complaints were about fumigants, the agency and Congress decided to develop labeling adequate to protect health and environment from unreasonable risk.

Congress amended the Federal Insecticide, Fungicide and Rodenticide Act in 1984 to include use restrictions on fumigant labels. Applicators who do not follow label instructions are violating federal law, Lane said.

"It's amazing what people will do in using these chemicals," Lane said. "I have slides of them running around half-dressed and I've had people tell me they store the chemicals in the back of their trucks."

"Until recently, we couldn't do anything about it," he said. "Now, if you don't wear protective clothing, for example, you are misusing the product and we can do something about it."

Applicators who charge a fee for fumigation must be licensed by the Mississippi Department of Agriculture and Commerce, according to Jim Haskins, an inspector with the department's Division of Plant Industry.

"You must be trained to use a fumigant because of the label and because of the law," Haskins said.

Following application restrictions is but one part of storage bin management. Farmers must also keep bin areas clean of debris, control temperature and moisture inside the bin and time the application of protectants and fumigants to the presence of pests.

Farmers who have not practiced sound bin management have caused problems for those who do.

"We lost our share of the world market because of quality problems with our grain," said Bobby Hendrix, a technical sales representative with Gustafson, Inc. Gustafson manufactures Reldan, a grain protectant.

"We've got to be upfront about our refused entry problems and our lost market share," Hendrix said. "Good quality in our grain begins at home with our farmers."

Inadequately managed grain bins are nothing but giant incubators for insects.

"If you don't control, then all you're doing is growing insects," said Dr. Bill Jany, a product manager for American Cyanamid. American Cyanamid manufactures Malathio, a grain protectant.

"If you're just relying on chemicals, you're already sunk," Jany said. Good bin management requires an integrated system of cleaning and fumigating empty bins, treating grain before it is stored, monitoring for pests and treating the infested grain if pest problems persist.

Before pests can be chemically controlled they must be identified. Proper identification insures that the right chemical is used to control the infestation.

"Insect identification is essential to sound management and control of grain," Hamer said. "The best thing you can have is a reference manual."

Some insects threaten stored grain by feeding on the kernels. Others lay eggs in or on the kernels and the hatching larvae feed on the contents. Many pests eat storage by-products—excess plant materials, loose kernels, mold, fungi and dead insects.

"If you don't have these things for insects to thrive on, you're going to have less of a problem," Hendrix said. "Clean that bin out as close as you can."

Doing MORE...With LESS! by the staff of THE MOTHER EARTH NEWS

MAKING KLONDIKE-STYLE SOURDOUGH PANCAKES

The key to successful sourdough cookery is to acquire and maintain a healthy starter sponge—the living, growing yeast culture. You can purchase sourdough starter from mail-order supply houses, but the fastest, most economical, and, ultimately, the most satisfying way to obtain it is to grow your own.

To make sourdough starter from scratch, place two cups of water in a plastic, glass, or earthenware bowl, mix in one yeast cake or a package of active dry yeast, then blend in two cups of unsifted all-purpose flour. Cover the bowl with plastic wrap or a damp cloth and allow the blend to ferment overnight in a warm place, 85° to 95°F, stirring at least once with a non-metallic spoon. The next morning the culture will be frothy from the carbon dioxide produced by the yeast, and the flour and water you added will have been consumed. The starter will now be ready to bake with, but to store it for future use, refrigerate it in a covered nonmetallic container. Stir it occasionally (once a day isn't too often), and if you won't be using it for a long while, feed it once a week or so by removing or discarding about half the sponge, then stirring in a cup of flour and a cup of warm water. Let the starter ripen overnight, as you did in the beginning, and with each replenishing, the starter will grow a little healthier and a little sweeter.

The rule of thumb when using a portion of the starter in a recipe is to replace that portion with equal amounts of both flour and water. Therefore, the night before you want to prepare a sourdough pancake breakfast, use the following procedure. Remove the starter from the refrigerator and measure the amount needed into a nonmetallic bowl. The recipe that follows calls for two cups of sourdough sponge, so bowl. The recipe that follows calls for two cups of flour and tepid water. To replace the cup of starter you'd need to add one cup each of flour and water to the original container. Cover the containers lightly, and let both sponges ferment overnight in a warm place. Next morning, return the original starter to the refrigerator; the second batch of sponge will now equal about two cups and will be ready to be made into light, delicious pancakes.

To make 20 or so medium-sized flapjacks, separate the yolks and whites of two eggs. Beat the whites until they're fluffy, then fold in a tablespoon of sugar or honey. Beat the yolks slightly, and add 1/2 teaspoon of salt. Stir the two cups of sourdough sponge into the yolks, then gently fold in the beaten whites. Finally, mix a teaspoon of baking soda with 1-1/2 teaspoons of tepid water, and blend this into the batter by hand.

Drop the batter by large spoonfuls onto a well-greased, medium-hot griddle—or use a seasoned cast-iron fry pan. Cook the pancakes until they are golden brown on both sides, flipping them only once, when the tops are full of bubbles. To serve additional people, add an extra egg per person, and increase the other ingredients accordingly. If the batter is too thick, add more water. And if a test cake tastes strong or sour, sweeten the batter by adding a pinch more baking soda.

First consecutive takeoff and landing attempt in all 50 states underway

Lauren McDaniel of Pass Christian will serve as the official Mississippi observer for a national record flight attempt scheduled to land and take off at Gulfport-Biloxi Regional Airfield Sunday.

Pilots Mike Hance and Milton Mersky are planning to arrive at 10:30 a.m. in their turbo-charged Mooney 252.

McDaniel will certify that the airplane landed in Mississippi and will record the time in the pilots' logbook.

Both Hance and Mersky are familiar with record-breaking flights, and they worked at Mission Control during the recent round-the-world flight of the "Voyager."

"I'm really excited to be part of this record attempt," McDaniel said. "I've always been interested in aviation and this flight gives me a chance to be an active part of an exciting event. I'm inviting all my friends to come out to watch history being made right here in Gulfport."

Purpose of the flight, which is being called "Flight 50," is to generate funds to support the Youth and Education Programs of the Experimental Aircraft Association Aviation Foundation, according to Hance.

"We hope to provide funding for EAA Aviation Foundation programs that offer deserving young people an opportunity to learn more about aviation. We're looking forward to our stop in Gulfport and we invite everyone to come out to see the event."

The flight also is sanctioned by the National Aeronautics Association (NAA) and McDaniel is their official observer.

Hance explained, "The Mooney 252 aircraft was chosen for its speed, fuel economy and comfort."

The EAA Aviation Foundation is a non-profit, educationally oriented organization affiliated with the Experimental Aircraft Association (EAA), an international membership organization headquartered in Oshkosh, Wisc.

McDaniel's father, Paul McDaniel, is the president of EAA's Gulf Coast chapter.

Myths About Sexuality Affect Teen's Learning

By Norine Barnes
Child and Family Development Specialist
Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service

Sex education is a controversial issue. Opposition to sex education programs is based on the assumption that the responsibility for sex education belongs to the family.

The irony is that most parents don't even talk to their children about sexuality. Those that do often don't provide the information children and teens need. Sex education takes place for children and teens in many different ways with the help of many different people.

With so much misinformation about sexuality, there is little doubt that accurate and useful information is needed. But the most important sex educators for children are their own parents.

Parents are also the most important models of morality for their children and therefore should give guidance, understanding and knowledge to their children. If parents don't assume their responsibility, children and teens will be exposed to accurate and inaccurate information that may not be in accordance with family values, thus leading to conflict and unhappiness.

Why don't parents talk more about sexuality to their children? First of all, they sometimes lack information; so rather than appear as if they don't know the answer, they choose not to talk about the subject.

Second, many parents are embarrassed. They grew up in an era when sexuality was not discussed as openly and therefore they feel uncomfortable discussing sexuality. Parents need to have accurate information to be seen as a good source of information. If children don't think parents have the answers, children won't ask the questions.

Sexuality can be a controversial issue as well as an emotional one. It is therefore important to dispel any myths associated with it so that discussions will be effective rather than counterproductive.

Myth No. 1. Providing information on sexuality fosters more sexual activity on the part of children and teens.

Research over the last decade has provided sufficient evidence to refute this myth. As a matter of fact, there is some evidence to the contrary. That is, it may actually be that children and teens who don't have correct information about sexuality participate more in sexual activities.

Myth No. 2. "Sex education" is responsible for the sexual revolution that has taken place during the last decade.

Even though there has been a gradual increase in sexual activity, there is little data to support the notion of a sexual revolution. It's been more of a gradual evolution. What children and teens need is accurate and honest information to help them deal with pressures and myths like "everyone's doing it." In reality, probably one-half of the teens in the U.S. are sexually active.

Myth No. 3. Fathers should teach their sons about sex and mothers teach their daughters.

While the same sex parent may assume primary responsibility, both parents should be actively involved whenever possible. After all, as adults we all relate to both sexes. Children need to learn about and relate to both sexes.

Myth No. 4. If my child or teen doesn't ask questions, then he already has the information he needs.

The problem with this myth is that if you don't know anything, it's hard to ask questions. Children may also be afraid or embarrassed to ask questions, especially if they sense that the parent is uncomfortable. The absence of questions on the topic of sexuality should be more of a concern for parents than the questions that teens do ask.

NO-THE SEA COAST INC. - SUNDAY, JULY 26, 1987

ABOUT GRAPES

They're called the natural snack. So refreshing in the sizzlin' summer days ahead. Morning. Noon. Night. And at Everyday Minimum Pricing the taste is so much more delightful.

So pick up a bunch today and give your family a taste treat.

The information below should be helpful to you in your product selection:

Variety

There are many different varieties available . . . in different colors . . . both seeded and seedless. Special favorites are the Thompson Seedless, Red Flame Seedless, Exotic and Ribier.

Thompson Seedless

These grapes are medium-to-large light green . . . with a sweet, refreshingly cool taste.

Red Flame Seedless

These grapes are round and red in color. They feature a slightly tart yet crisp flavor.

Exotic

These grapes are large black grapes and come in long clusters. They have a crisp, yet subtle flavor.

Ribier

These grapes are jet black and come in medium-to-large clusters that spread out from the top. They have a mild, light flavor.

Selection:

Grapes do not get riper or sweeter after picking; therefore the best way to select good grapes is by the color and touch. Green grapes are most flavorful when they are yellow-green. Red grapes are most flavorful when all the grapes in the bunch are a full red color. Blue-black grapes should have a rich dark color.
